CG Power and Industrial Solutions Ltd. a subsidiary of Tube Investments of India, reported a 146% rise in standalone net profit for the first quarter ended June to ₹124 crore on savings in procurement, increased productivity and reduction in finance costs on account of loan repayment. Revenue from operations grew 63% to ₹1,559 crore, with industrial systems accounting for ₹1,106 crore and power systems making up the balance, the firm said in a regulatory filing. During the period, TII exercised its option to subscribe to 8.52 crore equity shares by paying the warrant subscription money of ₹55 crore. Post the allotment, TII shareholding stood at 58.05%. The company directed the proceeds towards operations and expansion of the business, working capital and general corporate purposes. CG said it repaid remaining term debt of ₹100 crore out of internal accruals and the term loans now stand paid in full. The board approved a capital expenditure of ₹210 crore for FY23, to be spent on expansion, debottlenecking, modernising existing facilities, R&D, IT and Environment, Health & Safety. Shares of the company fell ₹1.80, or 0.81%, to ₹220.20 on the BSE. The creators of She-Hulk: Attorney at Law have discussed the challenges of having a CG character lead a series, acknowledging the "growing pains" they went through to achieve the desired results. She-Hulk head writer and executive producer Jessica Gao spoke to IGN at San Diego Comic-Con 2022 about the extraordinary challenge of relying almost entirely on VFX to bring Tatiana Maslany's titular superhero to life. Gao admitted it had been a process of "trial and error" and not one that they would necessarily rush to repeat, even though they eventually managed to pull it off. "This was unprecedented because [Marvel has] never made a TV show where the lead character is completely CG when she's the title character," Gao explained. "When we first started, we didn't really have a plan or know how we were gonna do it. We just knew we were gonna do it and I just figured, 'Look, it's Marvel. They know what they're doing. They're gonna figure it out.'" However, Gao admitted that it was not as simple as that and it took time for the team to reach an outcome that they were satisfied with. "It's been a process of trial and error," she added. "There's been a lot of growing pains. I think if we had to do it over again, we would probably think long and hard about how often we want a CG character on screen, but it all worked out." Director Kat Coiro, on the other hand, viewed the undertaking as less of a challenge and more of an opportunity to experiment with VFX using the suite of tools that were available to them. She explained that the actors helped them to incorporate that into production, as they worked together to capture the authenticity of their characters. "One of the coolest things about working with Marvel is that you get to try every tool that is out there and it's right on the cutting edge, so our methodology was [to use] everything that exists to capture actors' honest performance," Coiro said, sharing more about their approach. "It didn't even feel like a challenge at the end of the day. It felt like a part of the process." The first trailer for She-Hulk received significant backlash for the sub-par quality of its VFX but the footage also revealed some important connections to the greater MCU as well as a few new players - including Frog Man, the beloved oaf with a heart of gold who has already made it into the hearts of fans across social media. She-Hulk SDCC Trailer A new trailer for She-Hulk debuted at Comic-Con, teasing more of the series ahead of its premiere on August 17 and confirming the rumored appearance of Charlie Cox's Daredevil. Marvel also delved deeper into their plans for the next few years, announcing that She-Hulk would be the penultimate Phase 4 entry and that more Avengers films are on the way. The Japanese gaming giant has acquired 100% of the shares in the CG production company and intends to rename it "Nintendo Pictures", upon which it will focus on expanding Nintendo's portfolio of "visual content". What are the terms of Nintendo's acquisition of Dynamo Pictures? According to an official Nintendo announcement released earlier today, the Tokyo-based CG production house Dynamo Pictures is now a wholly-owned subsidiary of Nintendo. The production company has 34.5 million yen in capital and was originally founded back in March 2011, before which various Dynamo staff members assisted with the production of the rather poorly-received Metroid: Other M. Now, however, Dynamo, which will be renamed "Nintendo Pictures" following the closing of the deal, will be repurposed as a Nintendo visual content production house. Nintendo has a rich portfolio of IPs to draw on for its new Nintendo Pictures productions (although some third-party Smash Bros characters likely won't be appearing). The Nintendo announcement of Dynamo's acquisition states that the studio will now focus on "the planning and production structure of visual content in the Nintendo group". Given that Dynamo largely makes CG animation, it's likely that Nintendo is looking to make CG movies or shows starring some of its characters. Dynamo's previous work includes Final Fantasy XV: Kingsglaive, Resident Evil: Infinite Darkness, and Dragon Ball Super: Super Hero, so it's a studio with a pretty solid pedigree. Despite this, Nintendo says the acquisition will have "only a minor effect" on its fiscal results for the financial year. What movies will Nintendo work on with its new Nintendo Pictures division? Nintendo's next major movie project is the upcoming Super Mario Bros movie, which will star Chris Pratt (and will presumably be significantly better than the 1993 adaptation was). It remains to be seen what the company intends to do with its new Nintendo Pictures acquisition, however. We could see more off-the-wall anime productions like the 80s Mario movie recently restored by fans, but it's more likely we'll see a glut of Nintendo CG shows and movies with major franchises like Mario and Zelda at the forefront of the slate. Nintendo's next major movie project is the upcoming Super Mario Bros film, which may or may not inform what Nintendo Pictures does next. We'll have to wait and see what Nintendo Pictures' inaugural project ends up being, but one thing's for sure: video game movies are increasingly big business. There's long been a perception that good gaming movies can't exist, but recent releases like Tom Holland's Uncharted and Resident Evil: Welcome to Raccoon City show that studios are still very willing to try on this front. Successful TV shows like The Witcher (and its maddeningly catchy songs) and Castlevania also demonstrate that there's still an appetite for great visual content based on games, so hopefully, Nintendo Pictures can contribute to that small but growing canon. We'll bring you more on this as we get it. Edit Invictus - Voittamaton (2009) The Australia Community Guide is your online guide to the Country of Australia. "I'm so happy that CG is investing in my future with the scholarship I've been awarded. I plan to use this support to eventually be able to greatly impact Bermuda with my expertise." "The CG Insurance Alan Peacock Scholarship is made possible through a long-standing partnership with Bermuda Foundation for Insurance Studies (BFIS)," a spokesperson said. "Each year, BFIS helps facilitate scholarships from their own organization as well as various sponsors. This year, the CG Insurance Alan Peacock Scholarship was the only scholarship offered by a traditional insurer with the largest financial reward. "We have greatly appreciated CG Insurance's strong support for BFIS for many years. CG has provided scholarship funding to no less than 10 BFIS scholars since 2006. It has been great to partner with a local company who truly appreciate the work that BFIS undertakes in assisting students to gain the education necessary to work in the insurance industry. It is pleasing to know that they will continue to provide support to Giovanni as he completes his education." "At CG, we believe education is paramount to the development of our communities." CG's Chief People Officer, Katherine Cupidore shared. "We are dedicated to providing meaningful opportunities that foster and encourage our local students to pursue their educational goals.
